Commentary

Nike was the best performer this month, rising +7.5%. The company released strong results at the end of September and subsequently a range of competitors and official datapoints suggested a healthier consumer than previously thought. Microsoft was second best, up +7.1%. The company reported an excellent first quarter 2024 result, with revenue growth of +12% and Azure growth of +28% both well ahead of market expectations. West Pharmaceutical Services was the worst performer, down -15.2%. Despite the company reporting strong Q3 results, it lowered its full year sales growth target by -1% as some customers delayed orders into FY24. Mettler-Toledo was second worst, down -11.1%. The share price was hit by the continued news flow relating to a slow-down across the life sciences tools industry, as customers enter a de-stocking cycle post Covid.
